Public gatherings are increasingly vulnerable to violent attacks and criminal activity because of their relative accessibility and large number of potential targets. While remaining vigilant in the deterrence of traditional targets and high-profile events, it's equally important to focus on securing public gatherings.

The PA GOHS and CISA foster collaboration between the private and public sectors to mitigate risk and enhance the security and resilience of public gatherings, reducing the likelihood of a successful attack or, for those incidents that do occur, limiting the impacts to life and property. To help organizations mitigate potential risks in today's dynamic and rapidly evolving threat environment, CISA provides a compendium of resources for securing public gatherings.

Objectives:

- Understand the mass gathering threat landscape from intelligence officials.
- Enhance your organization's knowledge about fusion centers and how to engage them.
- Learn about the PA Governor's Office of Homeland Security.
- Learn about CISA's several security planning products available to support threat mitigation for public gathering events and public business locations.
- Understand all the programs, products, and services available locally from CISA Region 3, including the field personnel available in your community.

Intended Audience:

- State and local governmental/municipal leaders and organizations
- Organizations and venue owners/operators sponsoring mass gathering events.
- Federal, State, and Local Law Enforcement.
- Security providers for mass gathering events.
- Emergency response organizations
- State and Local Emergency Management
- Mass Gathering Event Staff and Volunteers
